Don't be a DICK

Who are we?

We are a team dedicated to changing the energy landscape. We innovate, we build, and we empower our customers with technology that is powerful, pragmatic, and incredibly important. Our mission is to put knowledge and control back into the hands of energy users, and we are exceptionally good at it.

Our Values

Collaborative

- You inspire others with your thirst for excellence
- You contribute effectively outside of your specialty, and share information openly and proactively
- There's no personal agenda when you disagree with others, and you only say things about fellow employees you will say to their face

Ballsy

- You take smart risks
- You say what you think even if it is controversial
- You challenge prevailing assumptions when warranted, and suggest better approaches

Clear

- You make smart decisions despite ambiguity, and can separate what must be done well now, and what can be improved later
- You exhibit bias-to-action, and avoid analysis-paralysis: make tough decisions without agonising
- You accomplish amazing amounts of important work

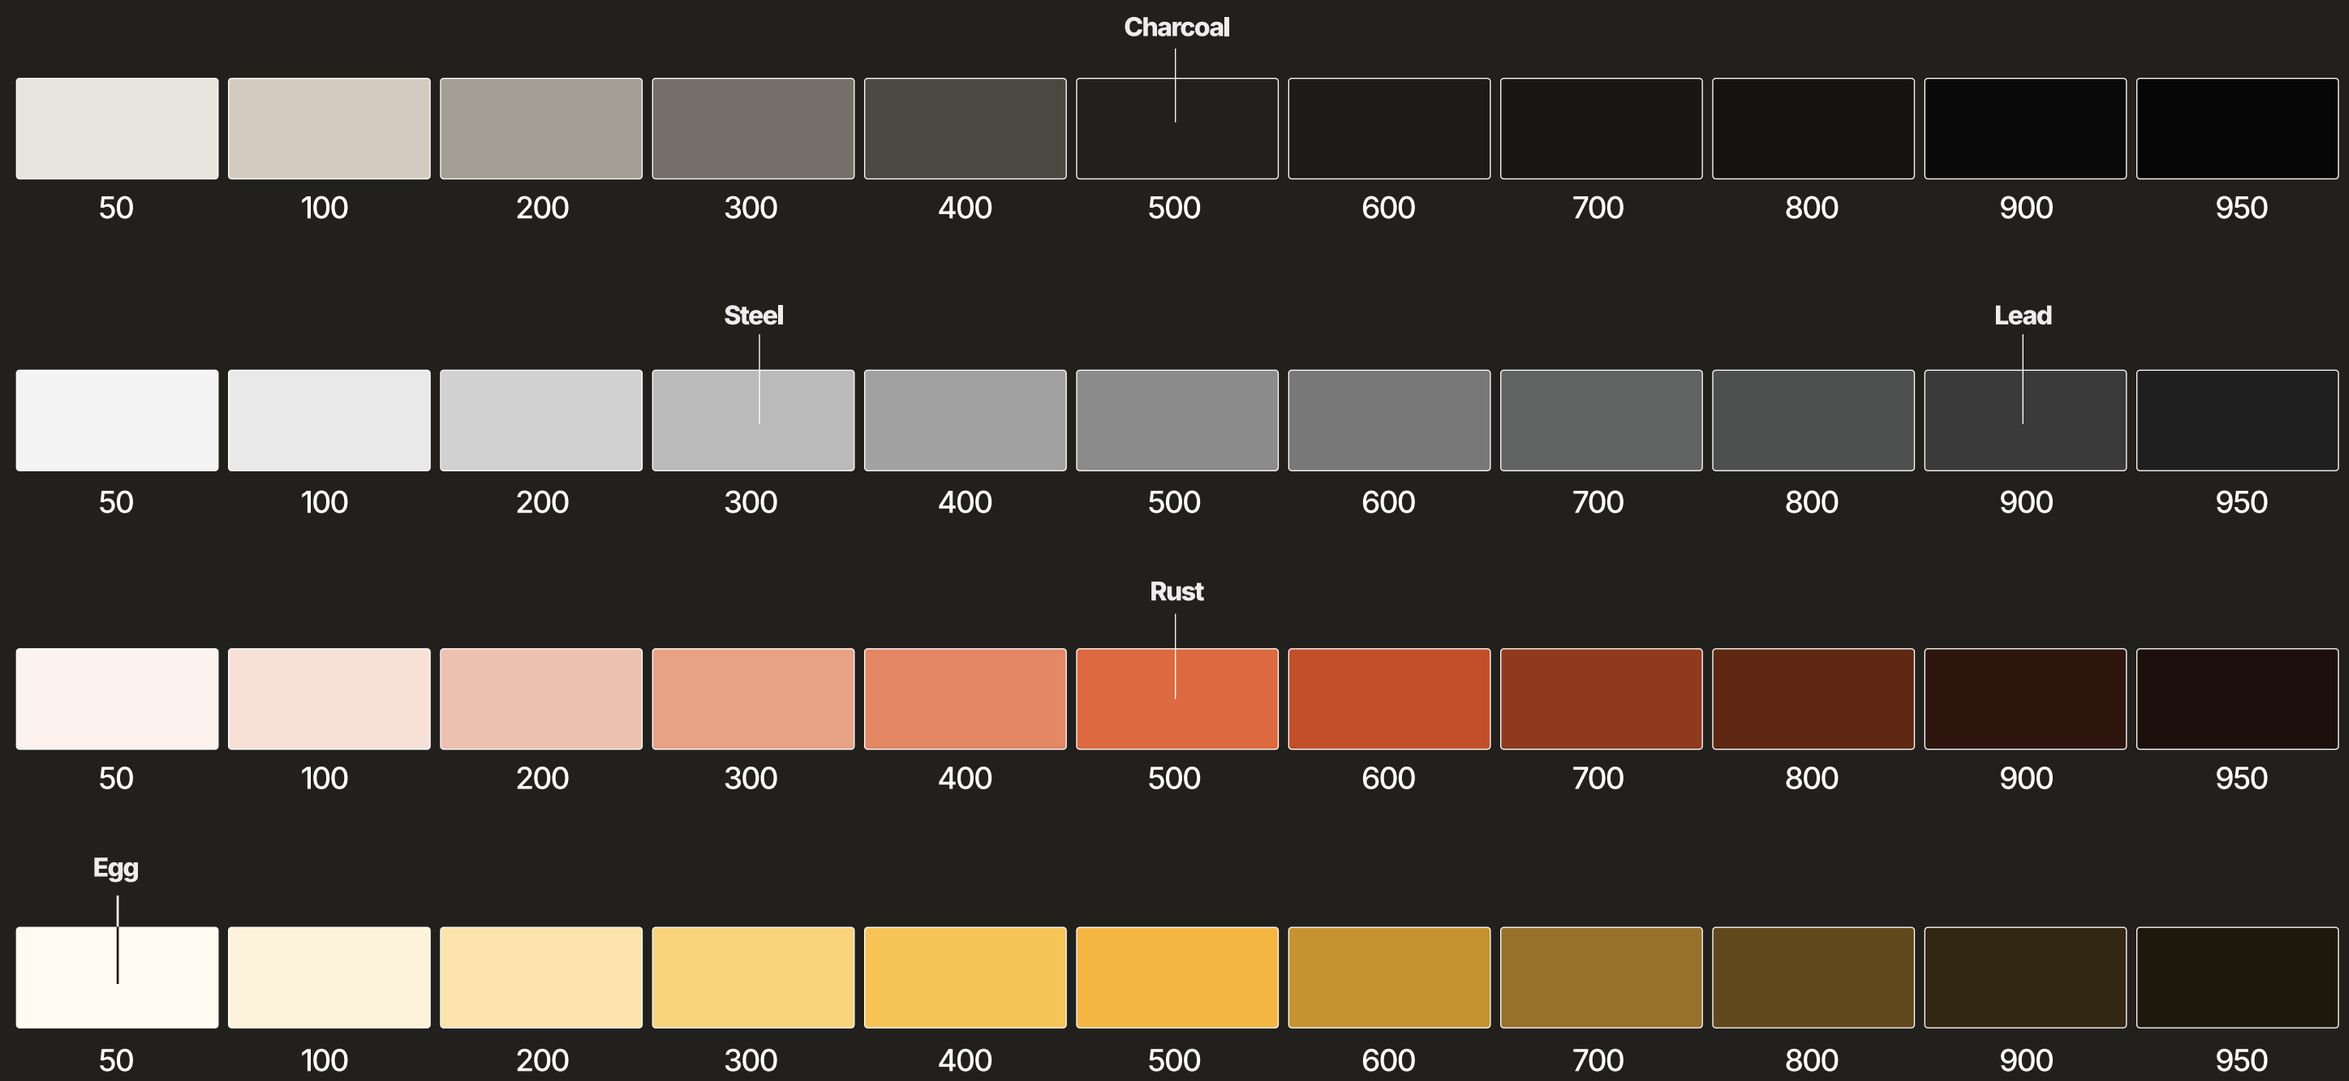
Tailwind CSS Colour Palette

Tailwind's color palette approach provides a professional, pre-defined set of colors with intuitive names, allowing the creation of visually consistent and harmonious designs. This system functions like a curated paint swatch book, replacing random hex codes with a logical scale of shades for every color family to ensure a polished look.



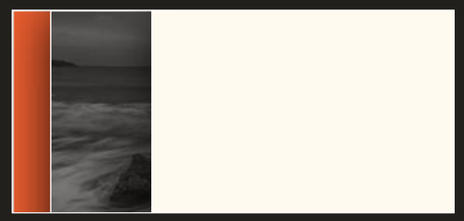
Graphic Device

The graphic device is split into three sections. This allows two smaller areas for branding and support information, and the large area for content.

Rust Belt
The orange column is primarily for placement of the logo and secondary information. This should remain the same size in all executions.

Graphic Section
The graphic area is designed to add can be extended to match the size of the content area, or swapped with the content area to provide an alternate cover design.style.

Content Section
This section can use charcoal or egg as background colours. It can also be swapped with the graphic area for an alternative cover design.



Photography

Within Brutalist brand guidelines, black and white photography is mandated to strip away color, forcing all visual communication to rely on the core principles of form, texture, and the stark interplay of light and shadow. This directive ensures that all brand imagery, from product shots to portraits, possesses a raw, uncompromising honesty that accentuates geometric shapes and structural integrity. By enforcing a strictly monochrome palette, the brand guidelines create a powerful and cohesive visual identity that communicates timelessness, strength, and a rejection of superficial trends.

Shareholder Update

A step change for Blackcurrent.

It seems strange to say this but 2024 has been a crazy year, good but crazy. In the middle of an economic slowdown for NZ Blackcurrent has been making good progress on both our revenue numbers and strategic partnerships.

Our revenue numbers have been consistent since May and are now starting to grow as our Flex product (was Grid hub) starts to make inroads into the rural market.

Strategic partnerships

- Electric Kiwi (EK), Signed HOA to be the Flex supplier to EK and its customers, schools, C&I (not residential).
- Farmlands Strategic card partner (Pending final lawyer review) Blackcurrent to be the electrification partner for Farmlands shareholders (82,000) running a Farmlands Flex program of work leading to a more defined relationship in the new year.

The team have been working on a pilot program with Farmlands Year 0, we have been raising 4-6 leads a week in the rural market with no marketing or marketing spend.

We have had three sales in early October with another 2-3 expected by the end of the month, its exciting times and we have moved into a delivery stage that to be honest I thought was still six months away.

Pipeline movement & strength.

We're happy to report a robust financial performance in January. We have met our projections and placed Blackcurrent in a positive position for Feb and Mar. We will outline the sales team's recent achievements later in the update.

New Partnerships, Projects and Collaborations.

Ara Ake are partnering with Blackcurrent to provide funding, introductions and advice with a focus on commercialising our platform. Ara Ake are funding a community-based Smart-Grid with "Behind the Meter" decentralised generation and storage, and "Community Side of the Meter" centralised generation and storage. The BC platform is critical for both the end customer and the network operator, becoming the operations centre for decentralised generation and storage networks. This project is key in demonstrating how to deal with uneconomical parts of the network and solve the capacity challenges facing NZ Inc.

Farmlands are one of New Zealand's largest buying groups with $2.5billion in annual transactions. They drive innovation for their Shareholders and understand the importance of electrification for all 85,000 of their customers. We are currently developing the "Farmlands Energy Program" which will build energy generation and storage across the Farmlands portfolio of properties, including their "big card partners" such as Mitre10. Part of the programme of work is developing a set of "off the shelf" Microgrid solutions that will create a new revenue stream for Farmlands.

The Lines Company is a forward thinking distribution company looking for innovative solutions to better support their customer electricity needs. The Lines Company is partnering with Blackcurrent on many of our current projects.

The Energy Trap

Why it is costing you more than you think...

You've probably felt it - your energy bills are rising faster than your main source of income. Electricity is becoming an increasingly significant cost. Despite investing in more efficient systems and smarter ming your bill keeps climbing.

Its not out of the question that the cost of electricity could double over the next 10 years.

Why?

Because the system isn't built for you. It's built for the grid, the middlemen and the retailers.

rmers don't get to set the price, they just pay it.

"Fiddling around the edges of a broken system is not enough, and New Zealanders are losing faith as fast as they are losing money."

Mike Casey, CEO, Rewiring Aotearoa

is isn't about solar, it's about control.

h energy prices rising year after year, switching to solar won't be ough. Farmlands FLEX gives you control over your energy use - and ability to earn even more revenue by selling power to the grid at t market rates.

Spot Market Opportunity: Earn revenue by selling excess electricity at real-time prices.
Reduced Electricity Costs: Unmatched savings through intelligent management of your energy usage.
Farmlands Partnership: Trusted by farmers and agricultural businesses across New Zealand.

Case Study

Unlocking Rooftop Value on a Commercial Property.

Overview

Location: Wanganui.
Building Owner: Syndicated Investment Group.
Building Tenant: National Big box Retailer.

The building owner engaged Blackcurrent to assess how rooftop solar could unlock new value from their Whanganui property. The project aimed to enhance revenue, increase property value, and drive sustainability performance.

Aerial view of the 200 Taupo Quay property with proposed solar installation.

Situation

The initial concept proposed selling electricity directly to the tenant through a Power Purchase Agreement (PPA).

- Tenant's existing daytime rate: 14.3¢/kWh (5-year term, 3 years remaining)
- Proposed PPA: 16¢/kWh (5-year commitment

This arrangement would have enabled the tenant to meet 100% of their 2030 carbon reduction target without capital investment. While the tenant declined the offer for now, they plan to revisit the proposal in 2027/28.

Alternative Model: 100% Export to Grid

Following the tenant's decision, The owner opted to proceed under a 100% export-to-grid model, selling electricity to the spot market. Average daytime spot price: 18¢/kWh (2-year rolling market average) The system's hybrid inverter design futureproofs the installation for future battery integration and demand response opportunities.
